

Building Net Sites with Windows NT

Do you want to use Windows(R) NT as your platform to build a powerhouse Net site offering Web pages, FTP, e-mail, and more? Then this is the book for you. Building Net Sites with Windows(R) NT provides all the essential tools and information you need to build a robust Internet site on Windows NT, incorporating the Internets array of application and administrative services--FTP, Web sites, e-mail, DNS, USENET News, and many others. Youll also explore more advanced Web techniques including clickable image maps, CGI programs, Server Side Includes, Java, database interfaces, and more. And, of course, youll learn how to configure and optimize NT for maximum performance as a Net platform while you discover what a workhorse it can be. Bundled with a CD-ROM packed with server, client, and utility software, this is the complete package for:

- * entrepreneurs who want to become profitable Internet service providers
- * hobbyists who want a Net presence they can operate themselves
- * commercial ventures seeking to expand their direct marketing reach
- * corporate employees looking to promote their companys image, distribute advertising, recruit applicants, provide tech support, and more
- * Intranets serving users on a private network.

The CD-ROM includes all the software you need to build your own complete Internet site on Windows NT. You get Microsoft Internet Information Server (Microsofts new Web server for Windows NT), Eudora Lite, DNEWS (News Server), LISTSERV (e-mail list server), Metainfo DNS, a score of EMWAC servers and toolkits, plus reporting and maintenance tools, several CGI scripts, and useful Web pages, ready to plug into your site.
