

Father Hans Urs von Balthasar: The Kneeling Theologian (A Handful of Catholics Book 3)

Thus it is necessary to commence from an inescapable duality: the finite is not the infinite. To von Balthasar the first question to be addressed becomes how the pilgrimage can proceed given the obvious fact that the infinite is not attainable by the finite. Love is his answer. But as finite beings it is not possible to love a faceless infinity. We can only love the embodiment of the infinite; such is our limitation. This enigma is solved in the presence of Christ the Incarnate One. The finite meets the infinite at the Cross. And in response we should kneel. About the Handful of Catholics series: It is my intention in this series of books to do no more than introduce the reader to some Catholic thinkers, Catholic doers, those whose Catholic faith was a work in progress and mystics; both converts and cradle Catholics. Very little of this work is original; it is mostly a distillation of the work of others who have devoted years of their lives to the lives of these women and men. It is not meant to be hagiography or the last word on the subject. Rather its simple goal is to make you want to delve further. Over the past six decades, ever since a Salesian priest told me that in order to make sense of history read about the actors, I have read the biographies of a large number of men and women, both secular and religious. The five potted biographies in this first volume are of people I consider to be somewhat overlooked in the annals of Catholic writings, and all of whom are compelling in different ways as I hope you will see.
