

A Broken Childhood II

When the whole of your young life has been devastated by abuse, how do you forgive those who harmed you? When the people who harmed you are your parents, how can you possibly get over that? Lydia Ola Taiwo was born in London in 1964. A qualified healthcare scientist, she works as a pathology manager in the London Borough of Bexley. She also undertakes speaking engagements for charities and works closely with AFRUCA, speaking out against child abuse, and with the Victoria Climbié Foundation. She is married and lives in Crayford, Kent. Lydia Ola Taiwo told the shocking story of her ruined childhood in her first book, A Broken Childhood: A True Story of Abuse. With Forgiveness she continues the story, describing how she and her sister were taken to Nigeria, away from the prying eyes of the UK authorities. Stuck in a boarding school in a strange country, subject to careless treatment from unknown relatives during the holidays and continued abuse when her mother returned to Nigeria, somehow she managed to find the inner strength to keep going. Would she ever escape from the endless cycle of cruelty and manipulation?
