

Lavender in the Drawers

This is the story of a wife and mother who returned from missionary work in Ghana to this country and discovered her marriage was breaking up, leaving her with four children to look after, no home, no secure income to purchase a home or a job to provide for her family. It is a remarkable story of a journey through pain which brought about personal growth and eventually a ministry to international students and their wives that was to be very significant. Jill has made such a journey through sorrow and tears but has discovered the grace of God to forgive, to find healing, to find provision for her family and to welcome others into her home. It is a wonderful story of hospitality that reveals the hospitality of God. The German word for hospitality is gastfreundschaft which means friendship for a guest. Hospitality, therefore, means primarily the creation of a free space where the stranger can enter and become a friend instead of a stranger. Hospitality is not to change people, but to offer them a space where change can take place. It is opening up an opportunity for others to find God in their own way. This is what I see in Jills story that will be such an encouragement to others that God can work all things together for good, if we but listen to his promptings and follow them. From the Foreword by Canon John Hughes
